The stock company Augustus Pitou sent out last season has been disbanded. The fear that it would be was expressed in these columns some weeks ago. It was a brilliant but costly experiment. Its artistic success was great, and in fact only limited by the inability of Mr. Pitou to find a great play suited to the company. The announcement is made that Miss Seligman has also left Mr. Pitou and man has also left Mr. Pitou and is arranging with some other manager for a starring tour next season. Who the lucky manager will be is not positively known, but rumor surgests Mr. Frank Sanger. Under fairly favorable conditions Miss Seligman ought to be the first actress of the land before the end of two more seasons, as she is the most promising to-day. Her ambition is lofty, and includes Shakespearean honors, which she should have no difficulty in obtaining. It is a great pity that the stock company of which Miss Seligman was the most brilliant member should be dissoired, as there is no organization in sight that can hope to take its place.

Miss Julia Marlowe has had an extraordinarily successful week at the Grand Opera House, considering the lateness of the sea son and the fact that prior to her perform ance here she was not particularly well known in Pittsburg. The Disparce has already recorded a general estimate of her abilities in the several roles which she has essayed, and it need only be further stated that it seems certain that Miss Marlowe's talents are especially great in the line of talents are especially great in the line of comedy. Her most successful characterization was Beatrice, in my opinion, but everything she did was highly artistic, and there can be no doubt but that a most brilliant tuture awaits her if her health does not fail. It is singular how few of the young actresses to-day who are stars have the daring to play such an extended repertoire of the legitimate drama as Miss Marlowe has done. I think, perhaps, it would be advantageous to her if she were to drop one or two of the plays and devote herself entirely to the Shakespercan comedies, in which size is so eminently well fitted to shine. She seems to have made as good an impression upon her own sex as upon the opposite, and very few actresses have leaped so suddenly into popularity in Pittsburg as she has. It is a pity that her managers do not realize the necessity of engaging a better comeany and avery discovered. not realize the necessity of engaging a better company and providing more perfect scenery and appointments, and if this policy of niggardliness is pursued it will have the effect of hampering Miss Marlowe in her unward first. in her upward flight.

The two most recent amateur successes in this city have reflected much credit upon Mr. Sturgeon, the well-known actor of this city, who conched both the Tuesday Night Club and at least a part of the Sewickley Valley Club in their recent productions. The performance of "Diplomacy" at the Doopesus Theater on Friday night was remarkably inished for the amateurs, and it could becriticised very favorably upon the same plane as professionals. Its performance recalls the fact that "Diplomacy" is one of the school which was so popular in England 20 years ago. "Diplomacy" itself had a prodigious run at the Prince of Wales' Theater in London, and the Bancrofts made their greatest hit in it, it has since been played by the Aendals, and in this country by several stable organizations, and it is reasonable to suppose that the revival of it might prove highly successful now. Herburn Johns. inished for the amateurs, and it could be-

Bijon Theater. "The melo-dramatic event of the season," is the way Howard P. Taylor's spectacular production, "The Pulse of New York," is billed at the Bijon Theater where it quens Monday a ternoon. It is a panoramic melodrama in four acts and 12 scenes. The play is apparently one of those melodramas that deal with the every-day life of New York, and contain abundant excuse for the introduction of scenic and mechanical effects of a smrtling character. It is said that no expense has been spared to make it attractive, and that the stage pictures which it contains are wonderfully realistic. The use of superlaare wonderfully realistic. The use of superlatives in the description of plays of this sort is to be expected, but from all accounts "The Pulse of New York" is quite up to the common melodramatic standard. The cast is headed by Miss Gracie Emmet and contains Miss Cora Macy, Irene Lawrence, Jennie Elberts, Mr. J. H. Ferris, Mr. Walter Jones, George Bates, Hugh Ford Ralph Dorman, Masier George Elliott and other favorite and well-known players.

The usual matinees will be given during this encagement on Wednesday and Saturday, also a special Decoration Day matinee on Monday atternoon.

Grand Opera House. "The Midnight Alarm," at the Grand this week, deals with the exciting life of a fireman in the great metropolis. Since the play was seen here last season it has been entively revised and new features added. The drama has two great realistic effects-the great railroad drawbridge over Shark run and the flight of the lightning express. As the train is heard approaching Sparkle and Gerfrade come upon the scene. They stumble over the prostrate form of Landon and almost at the same time discover that the bridge is open. Agenized at the danger threatening the man — Gerbude's brother threatening the man—Gertrude's brother and Sparkle's sweetheart—they rush into the signal house and try to pull down the lever. It is so high that Sparkle cannot reach it, but Gertrude, who is the tailer of the two, succeeds in graspling the bar. Her weight, however, is not sufficient to move the heavy machinery, and the train all the time is coming name its doom, Sparkle finds an machinery, and the train all the time is coming neaser its doom. Sparkle finds an old chair and, placing it against the lowest end of the lever, succeeds in getting hold of the lar, working out hand-over-hand until the united weight of the two girls sets the machinery in motion, the bridge swings into place just in time, and the train rolls across. The next act takes place in engline house No. 6, New York. After a terrific hand-to-hand struggle the scene revolves, showing the exterior of the engine house, with Curringford and Westmore fighting on the sidewalk. Landon runs on, takes in the scene at at glance, and throws Carringford off. The fire going is ringing turfously, the horses and engine are at their post, Westmore springs to his seat, and the engine is away like a flash to the scene of the confingation. It will be seen that for sensational effects "The Midnight Alarm" will be rather hard to beat.

The Alvin Theater.

The Lilliputians will close the season this Guilliver's kingdom of Lilliput they appear, the tallest among them being only 37 inches in height. This is Miss Minonen Becker, the leading indy, who is said to have unusual dramatic ability. Another talented member of this company is Franz Ebert, a matural comedian, whose little scene after a night out is said to be full of a quaint and original dreilery. The built to fine Lit iputions is said to be entirely off the conventional lines. In the first part it recommends class is said to be entirely off the conven-tional lines. In the first act it represents the high-jinks of the automata in the uncle's automaton shop, and in the third a host of pretty girls represent various games—chess, clice, cards, ninepins, billiards, etc. Among the scenic effects will be the Eiffel Tower, illuminated by electric lights; the automa-ton shop, the wandering woods and the paince of games.

World's Museum-Theater. The devil for a near relative of the "old boy" has been engaged by the World's Museum-Theater for this week in the person of Barnello, who is said to fairly breathe fire. His performance is considered the most original and remarkable of its kind will run for an indefinite period. When last seen in Pittsburg the show was such a pronounced success that Manager Davis at once re-engaged it for this week, and later decided to keep it here as long as its popularity continues. The show has been greatly strengthened for this special engagement, a complete Wild West exhibition having been added, along with many other new features. It is the intention to secure new performers and new acts every week during its stay in this city. A full ring show, menagerie, avisry and museum will be included in the entertainment. In the first place there will be the Emily Zolo troupe of electrical aerial wonders in midair feats; Cowboy Samson, the man with the chest of stone, who allows a horse and rider, weighing more than 860 pounds, to cross his breast: Clyde Philip, the world-renowned gymnast and contortionist from Sanger's London Circus, and the Albion Brothers in acrobatic feats. These are but a few of the many features offered patrons of the Fifth Avenue this week. To-morrow being Decoration Day till museum will open at 16:30 a. x and continue until 11 p. M. At 9 o'clock the circus will parade through the principal streets of the city. will parade through the principal streets of

Barry Williams' Academy. C. W. Williams' Cosmopolitan Vaudeville Stars, which comes here this week, include prime favorites with Pittsburg audiences. The Imperial Four have few equals in their The Imperial Four have few equals in their special line. The same may be said of Charles Harris, Nellie Watters, the Garnella Brothers, Harry Bartlett, Lottie Murpny, Gracie May, Phil Mack, McCabe and Daniels and C. W. Williams. Thursday evening's performance will be a benefit for the attaches of this popular theater. There will be an extra matinee on Monday afternoon.

Harris' Theater. To-morrow afternoon Daniel A. Kelly, ar established Pittsburg favorite exponent of established Pittsburg favorite exponent of sensational roles, will appear at Harris' Theater in his new play, "After Seven Years." The drama is the best Mr. Kelly has ever had in his repertoire. The drama will be staged in a superior manner, as each not will be set with special scenery and the mechanical effects introduced are intensely realistic. The company is composed of thoroughly competent people, it is said.

Stage Whispers. Moderana's tour for '92-'93 will be under the direction of Frank L. Perley and J. J. Buckley. ADA GRAY, in the famous emotional drams

"East Lynne," will be the attraction at Har-ris' Theater for the week commencing June 6. CHARLES BOWSER made a hit in Philadel phia last week as Jefferson Boomer in Helen Barry's new play, "Her Ladyship," written by H. Gratian Donnelly. SIDNEY ROSENFELD seems to have written a real success in "Imagination," a farcical comedy produced at the Fourteenth Street Theater last Monday in New York. En Collier is authority for the statemen that Heiena Collier's high kick in the kangaroo dance reaches an altitude of 8 feet 2 inches. He declares it is "out of sight." THE winners of the handsomest baby and mother in the Davis Museum contest last week will be announced in Monday morn-ing's papers. More than 30,000 votes were cast. A LITTLE theater will be opened on the first story of the Eiffei Tower in Paris June 1. There will be Sunday matinees. Gaston An-nan Callhavel is writing a revue, Paris en l'Air for the new venture.

HENRY IRVING has again made a change in his plans, and has decided to underline "King Lear" for his next production. Ellen Terry, of course, will play Cordelia. Original incidental music will be composed by Ham-

ROBERT GRIPPIN MORRIS says that he wrote "The Egyptian," and that Margaret Mather

neglects both to acknowledge the fact and to pay him therefor. Miss Mather's answer is that she was compelled to make so many changes in the book that it no longer bears trace of Mr. Morris' work. MRS. BERNARD BEERE, who will next season be under the management of Marcus R. Mayer, will return to England from Aussayer, where she has been very successful, about August and and will then appear at the London Uriterion in a round of old comedies. She will leave England October 10, and will begin her American season November 14 at the Manhattan Opera House in New York. THE theater cat at the Grand Opera House made another bid for histronic honors on Friday night. Between acts 4 and 5 of "Ingomar" she appeared before the curtain rangomar sine appeared before the curtain carrying in her mouth a finely-developed rat, which was still alive. She stood perfectly still, with a superb affectation of unconcern while the whole house applauded. Then she stole quietly into a stage box and disappeared among the audience, to the alarm of some of the ladies.

A Roman hansom cab, a Roman patrol wagon and an Olympian elevator are three of the novelties that are introduced in Digby Bell's production of "Jupiter," the Digby Bell's production of "Jupiter," the merry opera that has proven so successful at Palmer's Theater, New York, where it is now nearing its fiftieth performance. On Thesday evening next the second edition of "Jupiter" will be presented. It is Mr. Bell's idea to give a new edition every fiftieth performance. It will certainly be a novelty and will add renewed interest in the run of the opera.

EUGENE F. ESERLE, of this city, intends starting a school of the drama here,in which starting a school of the drama here, in which a thorough training for the stage may be had. Mr. Eberle is well known here from his connection with Pittsburg theaters during the stock company regime. He has also been stage manager at Booth's Theater and the Standard and Park Theaters, New York. His experience with large traveling companies such as Booth & Barrett's, Mary Anderson's, etc., has also been extensive and varied, and he ought to be able to teach young aspirants for the stage a good deal.

A CABLEGRAM from London to THE DISratch says: It will be recalled that Mr. Gladstone left the House of Commons one night last week while the Irish land bill was Garrick Theater, where, sitting in the wings The Lilliputians will close the season this week at the Alvin Theater in the play "The Pupit in Magic." It must not be inferred that the organization itself is in any way small; it comprises about 200 people, including two full ballets. Veritable strays from Gulliver's kingdom of Lilliput they appear, MR. CHARLES HANFORD, for many seasons past one of the principal leading actors in the Shakespearean companies of Mr. Edwin Booth, Mr. Lawrence Barrett, Madame Mod-jeska, Mr. T. W. Keene and the Robson and Jeska, Mr. T. W. Keene and the Robson and Crane Comedy of Errors Company, has purchased from the estate of the late Lawrence Barrett all the scenery, properties, wardrole, etc. used by Booth and Barrett in their grand production of "Julius Casar," and he will tour the country next season playing the part of Marc Antony, being the same as that he played with Booth and Barrett for two years. He has engaged Mr. Bennett Matlack for the part of Brutus and Mr. E. R. Spencer for the part of Cassia. Mr. Matlack has been a Shakespeareau star for the past six or eight years. Mr. Spencer is an actor of wide experience and has been seen for the past three years as Gurce in "Paul the past three years as Guroc in "Paul Kauvar."

DAVID HENDERSON'S American Extrava ganza Company will present their latest ex-travaganza, "All Baba, or Morgiana and the Forty Thieves," at the Chicago Opera House, June 1. This will be a week earlier ever witnessed. Signor Barnello altogether departs from the rut of the fire kings and accomplishes feats so wonderful that his have been in progress for nearly two weeks, under the direction of Richard Barker, and the company, chorus and ballet are already thoroughly easy in their respective parts and duties. The scenery, which is in nine sets and four tableaux, is by Frederick Dangerfield, who painted the beautiful canvases of the revived "Crystal Slipper" and "Sinbad." "All Baba," it is promised, will surpass in pictorial display, any of Henderson's famous scenic pieces. The costumes of the production have been made from designs by Howell Russell, of London, and Baron de Grimm. of New York. The greater part of them have been made in Chicago, in the wardrobe rooms of the Chicago Opers House, by Madam Elise Freisinger, assisted by Madam Prinz. About 190 of the garments, however, were brought over from Europe, where they were made by Alias, the celebrated London costumer. The imported costumes comprise the dresses of the "Forty Thisves" and those of one ballet. They are described as the most magnificent and expensive set of stage garments ever seen in this country; some of them, to be worn by minor characters and dancers, costing $900 and $500 aplece, while the dresses of one or two of the principals run as high as $600.

The love of our English cousin is shown pretty clearly by Mr. Augustin Daly's at tempt to become a member of the Garrick Club. Actor Bancroft proposed him, and the great name was duly inscribed in the candidates book. The committee, however, candidates book. The committee, however, incredible as it may appear, did not appear to want after Mr. Daly's society, and so the name of the first manager of America was withdrawn. The Garrick is probably the highest classed Bohemian club in the world. It is, however, the Bohemia of purple and fine linen, and there is not a trace of the sanded floor and clay pipe idea in its composition. Its members are drawn from every social strata, royal princes, bishops, peers, editors, literateurs, scientists, painters and actors. It is the hopeless ambittion of every actor to become a member, but the road into this club is even harder to travel than is the famous camel path through the needle-eye pass. A few, only a very few, of the theatrical profession are members, and with the exception of men like Henry Irving, Beerbohm Tree, Willard and a few others, most of the actors who belong to the club were members before they took to the stage. The other day, young Fred Terry (brother of Ada Rehan's great and probably only English rival), who has come steadily to the front in his profession, recently took a wild flight for membership of the Garrick, but even with his powerful support he was black balled. Mr. Daly, however, is an American, and that settled it. On the other side of the channel, I wonder if Deacon would have been sent to jail if he had been born in France instead of America. osition.
